U.S. Foreign Policy and the Next Administration: What does it mean for Malaysia and the SEA Region?

23 November 2020 | 10.00am UTC+8 | Via Zoom

OVERVIEW

With the results tallied and the announcement of the new U.S. president-elect, attention will soon turn to priorities for the next presidential administration. Given the backdrop of a historic global pandemic and the resulting economic challenges, we invite you to a discussion on U.S. foreign policy and global challenges. What will change and what will stay the same? How will this impact Malaysia and Southeast Asia? Please join us for a moderated discussion with Dr. Meredith Weiss, Professor of Politics at the University of Albany.

Meredith Weiss is Professor and Chair of Political Science, and Director of Rockefeller College's Semester in Washington Program. She has published widely on social mobilisation and civil society, the politics of identity and development, electoral politics and parties, institutional reform, and subnational governance in Southeast Asia, with particular focus on Malaysia and Singapore. Her publications include Student Activism in Malaysia: Crucible, Mirror, Sideshow (Cornell SEAP, 2011) and the forthcoming The Roots of Resilience: Party Machines and Grassroots Politics in Southeast Asia (Cornell University Press). Current projects include collaborative studies of "money politics", urban governance and public-goods delivery, as well as democratic representation and political elites in Southeast Asia, and a monograph on Malaysian sociopolitical development.
